What you can do is craft a lyric from that inspiration, using the kaizen principle to refine that craft. "Craft" is a very important word. Forget the idea that songs come from a place in the sky and channel through you. Sometimes pure inspiration strikes and things seem exactly like that, but usually every lyric benefits from crafting.

The Craft of Songwriting by Robbie O'Connell Definition A good song is the perfect combination of melody and lyrics. The melody should set a mood that enhances or at least is compatible with the lyrics. For example a funny song should have a bright or up-tempo melody and a sad or serious song should have a slow or deliberate tempo.
